The Trees, the first novel of Conrad Richter's trilogy The Awakening Land, is set in the wilderness of central Ohio. The simple plot - composed of what are essentially episodes in the life of a pioneer family before the virgin hardwood forest was cut down - is told in a third-person narration rich with folklore and suggestive of early backwoods speech. The central character is Sayward Lockett, the eldest daughter in a family who the narrator says "followed the woods as some families ...

The Trees (novel) - Wikipedia

"In his new novel, The Trees, Conrad Richter, author of The Sea of Grass, has written a moving story of the beginning of the American trek to the west at the close of the eighteenth century. So vivid is his description of the land, so real his characters and their problems, that one forgets he is painting a picture of an early American epic."

The Trees is Conrad Richter's first novel in "The Awakening Land" trilogy: he won the Pulitzer Prize in 1951 for his third novel in the series, The Town. Trees came highly recommended by my friend Charles, who has dependably shared my taste in movies and books, and hit a home run last year with his recommendations Lucifer's Hammer and The Mote in God's Eye.

The Trees by Conrad Richter - Goodreads

"Trees" (the first book of a trilogu) is a wonderful book by a writer I had never heard about (until I read David McCollough's "The Pioneers"). I was dazzled, through-out, by what the writer (Conrad Richter) SEES (and "knows") -- and by how riveting showing us THESE things was. This is writing of a very high order.

Story of the Lucketts, a wild, woodsfaring family, living a roaming life, pushing westward as the frontier advanced and as new settlements threatened their isolation

The trees, Conrad Richter

Toward the close of the eighteenth century, the land west of the Alleghenies and north of the Ohio River was an unbroken sea of trees. Beneath them the forest trails were dark, silent, and lonely, brightened only by a few lost beams of sunlight. Here, in the first novel of Conrad Richter's Awakening Land trilogy, the Lucketts, a wild, woods-faring family, lived their roaming...

Conrad Richter's "The Trees" is the first of a series of three novels called "The Awakening Land." The third novel, "The Town," won the 1951 Pulitzer Prize for fiction. Based on the quality I perceived in "The Trees," I intend to read the entire series. One reason I liked this novel so much is that Richter's characters are so rich and diverse.
